3. The mines were formerly worked by about 1,800 prisoners of war. Since the POW's were released, criminal and political prisoners have been brought in to work the mines. In addition to the prisoners, about 200 to 300 Czechs and eight Russians work in the Inspectorate. At the Vojna pit there are about 30 to 40 members of the SNB. The area of the Vojna shafts is surrounded by two barbed wire fences four meters apart. In each corner of the area is a watchtower on which are stationed SNB guards. In addition to guarding the mine area, SNB guards accompany the ore trucks to Jachymov and guard the prisoners when not at work.
4. The equipment of Inspectorate A-2 includes mining towers powered by electric motor, compressors for operating pneumatic drills at each shaft, and mobile naphtha compressors at the open pits. There is no machinery in the classifying section.
5. Ore from the shafts is inspected by a collector while it is still on the trucks. If the ore is found not to be radioactive, it is dumped on a refuse heap. If it appears to be radioactive, it is placed on a heap before the classifying station. There it is classified by prisoners under constant guard, and placed into bags bearing the name of the pit from which it came. The bags are sealed and once a week are shipped to Jachymov by truck.

6. Eight wooden barracks for the SNB have been built at a cost of 300,000 kcs each. In addition, transformers, mining towers and workshops have been built. The construction section is allotted 450,000 kcs monthly. In December 1949 construction was started on a labor camp in Brod and barracks for 30 to 40 SNB men. A rope factory in Pribram is being converted for use as storage space for the shafts of the Inspectorate.
7. In a wooden building in Brezove Hory, a suburb of Pribram, are six Praga RN three-ton trucks, several cars and a bus for the employees. The offices of the Inspectorate are in Pribram in a building opposite the post office and a brewery. The offices are as follows:
- a. Ground floor: SNB guards' room, kitchen and dining room for Soviet employees, offices of the factory council, supply room.
  - b. Second floor: Offices of the Soviet collectors, a room for checking and storing the meters used at the collecting section (meters are checked each day), a room for the collectors and surveyors, and the office of the geologist.
  - c. Third floor: Office of the Czech and Soviet managers of the Inspectorate, presentation office (podatelna), accounting office, security officer's office, telephone switchboard, and a room for the SNB men.
